TIPS FOR TEACHING PARENTS

Already you can see from the lesson sheet that our story is slightly different from those we regularly study. Both in this lesson and the next we will be following the actions of one man—first Judas and then Peter. To do this and still have a story we must draw from a combination of scriptures.

All this means a little more work for us parents. We must read all the suggested scriptures, see what these men did, and then put the whole thing together as one interesting story. This seems to be the best way to make the children truly feel the impact of the lives of these two men. By following Judas through his covetous schemes, we can clearly show our little ones the effects of greed in our lives. Judas' life, terrible as it was, can teach our children a valuable lesson—the fate of one who rejects Christ.

So take time to read the extra scriptures and find in them the story for your family's study.

FOR ADULT STUDY: Prov 15:27; Jer 17:11; Jas 5:3; 1 Tim 6:6-10; Lk 12:15; Ecc 5:10.
